To Whom It May Concern,

It is with great enthusiasm that I write this letter of recommendation for Jack Petrofski. As Jack's teacher in both 9th grade literature and his current American Literature class, I have had the pleasure of watching him grow into a dedicated, driven, and well-rounded individual. Jack's strong work ethic and passion for learning, combined with his exceptional athleticism, make him an outstanding candidate for any college.

Academically, Jack is one of the most determined students I have had the privilege to teach. In my literature classes, he consistently demonstrates a genuine interest in expanding his understanding of complex texts. Whether discussing the themes of hysteria and morality in Arthur Miller's The Crucible or exploring the societal critiques in Ray Bradbury's Fahrenheit 451, Jack approaches each task with curiosity and enthusiasm. He is not afraid to tackle challenges, often going above and beyond what is required of him to deepen his understanding.

Jack's discipline and drive are equally evident in his athletic pursuits. As a committed Lambert Baseball player, Jack brings the same level of determination and teamwork to the field that he exhibits in the classroom. Balancing the rigorous demands of academics and athletics can be daunting for high schoolers, yet Jack manages it with remarkable ease. His time management skills and dedication to improvement are qualities that will serve him well in college and in the real world.

Beyond his academic and athletic accomplishments, Jack is a young man of integrity and strong character. He is respectful, dependable, and a leader among his peers. His ability to connect with others sets him apart as someone who will undoubtedly contribute positively to any community.

I am confident that Jack's combination of academic curiosity, athletic talent, and personal character will make him an invaluable asset to your college or university. He is the type of student-athlete who will not only excel on the baseball field, but who will also leave a lasting impact on those around him.

Sincerely,

Stephany Tillis
